CULTURAL ENCOUNTERS

Counties, cities, nations and individuals all define themselves through their cultures. When we ignore our heritage or the work of our contemporary artists we risk loss of identity. In this project you leave behind the world of exams and assessments and go out to explore some of the educational territory that is hard to define and lies well beyond the confines of the school.

It's not about knowledge or any preconceived ideas. You won't like everything you see, but that's not what matters. Go to these exhibitions, galleries and museums with an open mind. Try to shape a response to what you see and hear, record some of it as you go through notes, observations and images: use your memory and your smart phone to record some of your responses.

In Thursday's 10 minute presentation find a lively and engaging way to pass on all aspects of your experience to the other groups so that a mosaic of the whole event is created.

■ 12.00pm - British Art: Ancient Landscapes - Salisbury Museum

The British landscape has been a continual inspiration to artists across the centuries and particularly the landscapes shaped and marked by our distant ancestors. The megaliths, stone circles and chalk-cut hill figures that survive from Neolithic and Bronze Age times have stimulated many artists to make a response. In this major new exhibition curated by Professor Sam Smiles, these unique artistic responses have been brought together to create a new discussion. Featuring the work of some of the greatest names in British art from the last 250 years, see John Constable, JMW Turner, Eric Ravilious, John Piper, Barbara Hepworth, Henry Moore, Paul Nash, Richard Long, Derek Jarman and more, as their work records and reflects on some of our most treasured ancient landscapes.

■ 11.00am - Lacock Abbey and the Fox-Talbot History of Photography Museum including 'Fractured Architecture, Cubist Photographs' by Thomas Kellner

<https://www.nationaltrust.org.uk/lacock-abbey-fox-talbot-museum-and-village>

<https://www.nationaltrust.org.uk/lacock-abbey-fox-talbot-museum-and-village/features/fractured-architecture-cubist-photographs-by-thomas-kellner>

Consider a mashup of the old saying "familiarity breeds contempt" and the song "Everything Old is New Again" and you will begin to see the world as Thomas Kellner depicts it.

Thomas is known for his photographs of familiar structures from all over the world. Even though his photographs show well known buildings whose 'straight' pictures would be immediately recognisable, his work is unique due to the artistic method he calls "visual analytical synthesis" in which he does not take one shot but a number of thoughtfully planned ones in order to create a picture out of contact sheets. His work is often referred to as Cubism considering that his creative process includes a construction but with the results resembling a deconstruction.
